

The Gathering

Falling Up

With a longing heart you turn the tides and say goodbye
With a love that always fades you hold on so tight
Hold back the tears
Legacy that stays so strong is pulling at your heart
All the castles that you made are falling apart
Love is waiting here, so did you
Come back, in these places
In these places this is all that you need
When you want to come back
In these places
In these places this is all that you need
When you want to come back
Blowing in the wind a taste of something tragically
Comes to find you when you fall and
When you're in need see beneath the skin
Always waiting is a love that moves your pain away
Always waiting will embrace and wash tears away
Places where this begins, so you
Come back, in these places
In these places, this is all that you need
When you want to come back

In these places
In these places, this is all that you need
When you want to come back
In these places
In these places
In these places
You may think that the world is never going to haunt you
(This place is safe)
That your love is always going to stay true
What do you feel when you fall asleep
(Jesus is longing)
That you will want the blood his hands can bleed
Come back, in these places
This is all that you need
When you want to come back
In these places
In these places, this is all that you need

When you want to come back

This is all that you want

This is all that you need

This is all that you want

This is all that you need
