Steadfast

The Color Morale

We've been deserted, that doesn't mean that we deserve it
Is it worth it, keeping ourselves at bay
Set sail, you've spent way too much time living your life, in exile
To say goodbye, to the shorelineMaybe if I'm sent off to sea, I'll find out what this means to me
I've got a message I carry, that I have forgotten to readMaybe if I'm sent off to sea, I'll find out what this means to me
I've got a message I carry, that I have forgotten to readI don't need another day, floating away
Lost in the sea of regret I've made
I want to wash up new for once
For once I don't want to float face downWe've been deserted, that doesn't mean that we deserve it
Is it worth it, keeping ourselves at bayYou can try and fail, but don't fail to try
Do I deserve this
If you're deserted, you can't desert it
You can never leave an island in your mind until you lose sight of the shoreline
You can try and fail, but don't fail to try
Some people spend their entire lives in exile
You can't never leave, an island until you lose sight of the shoreline
Times like these they come in waves
Make your footprint and send it right back awayAll you're saying to me tonight, here in the open skyline
Without darkness, no star can learn to guide the wayMaybe if I'm sent off to sea, I'll find out what this means to me
I've got a message I carry, that I have forgotten to readMaybe if I'm sent off to sea, I'll find out what this means to me
I've got a message I carry, that I have forgotten to readYou are not as lost as me
You are not as lost as meNo your not, no your not as lost as me
If you were and you were I wouldn't be here writingNo your not, no your not as lost as me
If you were if you were I wouldn't be here writingSome day you will find me
