

Loner

Ekoostik Hookah

Out on the road for the first time. A virgin running to the sun.
Thinkin' 'bout my folks in a world so far from mine,
Worrying about their eldest son.
And they're asking me, "How will you survive boy?"
And I say that I'll get by.
And they say to me, "Don't forget to write boy."
And I say, "When I have the time you know I'll try."
'cause I'm a loner. I'm a loner. I'm a loner.
Won't you please leave me alone?

As time went by I finally had a chance to visit. I almost wished I hadn't come.
When we sat down to eat the questions started coming.
Interrogation had begun.
They started asking me, "Where'd you get that tan boy?"
And I say, "Out on the beaches of life."
And they say to me, "Why don't you get hitched boy?"
And I say, "The last thing I need is a wife."
And they say to me, "You better go to school boy."

And I say, "When it's my time I'll know."
And they're asking me, "What if you get drafted?"
And I say, "If that's the case, then I won't go!"
'cause I'm a loner. I'm a loner. I'm a loner.
Won't you please leave me alone?

And they say to me, "You don't need three dogs boy."
And I say that we all need a friend.
And they're asking me, "Don't they give you hard times?"
And I say, "Yeah, but they'll be there in the end."
And they're asking me, "Why you look like Jesus?"
And I say, "It ain't because I try."
But when they're asking me, "How much do you party?"
I say, "I just like to get high, and high, and high, and higher!"
'cause I'm a loner. I'm a loner.
And I'm a stoner. Won't you please leave me alone?
