

Wasted Years

Escape From The Zoo

We started so young our direction unknown we just fell and we rose with the tides lightyears from perfect and destined to fail but it sure was a hell of a ride it all seemed so rad drugs n booze on the tracks til a friend turned up dead or in jail and after a while it got harder to smile once we realized we were living in hell

For days n days ran place to dull the hate and pain but the weights been lifted cuz were circling the drain wasted years photo albums buried under tons of beers i remember when we thought we were invincible kings of the road but now were growin old and slowin down

In the beginning it was all so exciting when we still had so much left to learn Weâ€™d not yet been jaded our senses unfaded when we still had hope left for the world Still fairly unfamiliar with tragedy and armed with a propensity for making the best out of bad but our dispositions far more dismal nowadays because somewhere along the way we forgot about all the good times that we had

For days n days ran place to dull the hate and pain
but the weights been lifted cuz were circling the drain
wasted years photo albums buried under tons of beers i remember when we thought we were invincible kings of the road but now were growin old and slowin down

If I could turn back time rewind the clocks to yesteryear I'd do it all the same cuz all the missteps got me here Learned my lessons payed my dues, the future's now no time to lose What's next is anybody's guess and I cant't wait to find out wasted years photo albums buried under tons of beers i remember when we thought we were invincible kings of the road but now were growin old and slowin down

wasted years photo albums buried under tons of beers i remember when we thought we were invincible kings of the road but now were growin old and slowin down

wasted years photo albums buried under tons of beers i remember when we thought we were invincible kings of the road but now were growin old and slowin down

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnlyrics.com/>