Amy Says

Flyleaf

Amy says she's all alone
Says the world doesn't even know
About the pain she hides inside
Says happiness is just a lie
Smell the roses, throw them down
Just whisper, don't make a sound, oh
Don't want the world to know the truth
You've been broken and abused by you
And Amy says, I see you laughing at the rain that hits your face
With your arms stretched open soaking in the love
In a world I find so hard, you find so beautiful
There's a hope in you deep inside for me
The colors of her mind
Bleed into each other
And as the morning melts the night
And the stars enchant another
While her eyes are still held shut
She can hear a still, small voice
Your words echo in her mind and your words are clear
And she knows you're here
I see you laughing at the rain that hits your face
With your arms stretched open soaking in the love
In a world you found so hard you finds so beautiful
There's a hope in you deep inside for me
I see you laughing at the rain that hits your face
With your arms stretched open soaking in the love
In a world you found so hard you find so beautiful
There's a hope in you deep inside for me
