

Trial of Tears

Dream Theater

Under the sun, there is nothing to hide
Under the moon, a stranger waits inside
People disappear, the music fades away
 Splashing through the rain
I'll dream with them one dayIt's raining, raining
 On the streets of New York City
 It's raining, raining
Raining deep in heavenI may have wasted all those years
 They're not worth their time in tears
 I may have spent too long in darkness
In the warmth of my fearTake a look at yourself
 Not at anyone else
 Tell me what you seeI know the air is cold
 I know the streets are cruel
But I'll enjoy the ride todayIt's raining, raining
 On that streets of New York City
 It's raining, raining
 Raining deep in heaven
Raining deep in heavenI may have wasted all those years
 They're not worth their time in tears
 I may have spent too long in darkness
In the warmth of my fearsAnd as I walk through all my myths
 Rising and sinking like the waves
 With my thoughts wrapped around me
Through a trial of tearsHidden by disguise, stumbling in a world
 Feeling uninspired, he gets into his car
 Not within his eyes to see, open up, open up
Not much better than you man, you knowStill awake
 I continue to move along
 Cultivating my own nonsense
 Welcome to the wasteland
Where you'll find ashes, nothing but ashesStill awake
 Bringing change, bringing movement, bringing life
 A silent prayer thrown away, disappearing in the air
 Rising, sinking, raining deep inside me
Nowhere to turn, I look for a way back homeIt's raining, raining
 Raining deep in heaven
 It's raining, raining
Raining deep in heavenIt's raining, it's raining

Raining deep in heaven
It's raining, raining
Raining deep in heaven
