Just Say Yes

Ken Andrews

I don't know which way I should turn,
I'm too afraid of getting burned.
When all the wells have come up dry,
It's hard to take another try.But I pick myself up off the floor,
And try my best just like I did before.Just say yes,
Just say yes.Every time I take a chance,
This hesitation pulls me back.
From finding out how I should be,
I want to know the real me.So I pick myself up off the floor,
And realize just who I was before.I can't listen to the voice inside,
That keeps on saying I sould never try.Just say yes,
Just say yes.I don't know which way I should go,
I'm too afraid of letting go.With all this doupt to overcome,
It's hard to see all that I've done.But I pick myself up off the floor,
And try my best just like I did before.I just set aside the feel within,
And walk on through the door that held me in.Just say yes,
Just say yes.
