Cassiopeia

Sara Bareilles

Come in close now, it's time to tell a story Long ago and so many years before we Ever were, ever dreamed we even could be There was her and her very first heartbeatAll alone in the corner of the night sky Spiral bones of a supernova starlight Fell in love with another burning bright she Dreamed of a way to ignite she said, Tonight Come on, come on collide Break me to pieces, I I think you're just like heaven whyCome on, come on collide Let's see what a fire feels like I bet it's just like heavenJust like heaven Just like heavenSuch a shameÂ nowhere near, even the near mist light years away From the hope of being sun-kissed anchored home in her interstellar sea but, poor lonely Cassiopeia So she sighs and she burns with desperation Learns to cry over love of constellations Then the spark from a star shooting too close They both smiled what a day to explode, she saidTonight Come on, come on collide Break me to pieces, I I think you're just like heaven whyCome on, come on collide Let's see what a fire feels like I bet it's just like heavenJust like heaven Just like heavenLong ago in a sky built before us
