The Teeth

Hanni El Khatib

We rolled on the street without friends
Trying to be someone
Not a fear in the world will be known?
And the sea is to desperate for us to swim or float
And the sharks they smell blood
And the veins in my arm but I knowCan't touch me if I don't want to let let them near
Can't touch me when the light begins to glow
Can't touch me 'cause I spit in stead of fear
Can't touch me when the teeth begin to showAnd the pressure appears to be weighing upon my back
But I carry it down to my grave and? Who I am
And if death is a fear that is birthed under life we know
And it? And it will buy us some time
Can't touch me if I don't want to let let them near
Can't touch me when the light begins to glow
Can't touch me when I spit in stead of fear
Can't touch me when the teeth begin to show.
