You're the Cocaine

Joshua James

Well I broke, I wrote a song
About our love and how it's strong
How your kisses keep me warm
And even when I make you cryIll still sing you lullabies
Make those gray clouds bright blue skies
Because youre the cocaine in my veinsThis is something I regret
Not confessing how I felt
How my heart beats quicker stillSo melt your body into mine
Become as one over time
Lord, shake her bones and make her mine
Because youre the cocaine in my veinsAnd darling, the dirt beneath your feet
And the scars that line your knees
Are what keep me moving on
Are what keep me moving onWhen broken down out on the streets
And not a sign that I can see
Youre the compass that I needYoure the cocaine inside my blood stream
Youre the bright light, the constant moon beam
Youre the north wind that will carry me home
Youre the woman Ive been looking for
Because youre the cocaine in my veins
