When Men Grow Old

Babyface

So many years that you sacrificed
So many chances you let go by
Girl, never once did you once complain, no way
Now he's got nerve just to criticize
You let yourself go like you've got no pride
You do what you do hopin' he'll stay
Well, the first thing you do is put on your make up
But he doesn't notice a thing, it's not how it's supposed to be
When men grow old, do they lose sensitivity?
When men grow old, they forget how to love
When men grow old, they have no sense of loyalty
Well, if that's how it is, I don't wanna grow anymore
So many nights when you sat alone
He's out with his friends like he's got no home
But you understood that he needed his space, well
But now it seems like that he's always gone
He won't admit there is somethin' wrong
He finds a young girl who will take your place, well
The first thing you do, you go get your hair done
But he doesn't notice a thing, it's not how it's supposed to be
When men grow old, do they lose sensitivity?
When men grow old, they forget how to love
When men grow old, they have no sense of loyalty
Well, if that's how it is, I don't wanna grow anymore
Time after time, year after year
So many women are drownin' in tears
Waitin' and hopin' and prayin' for love
Somethin' that most men don't know the true meanin' of Why can't they just open their hearts?
Don't they fall in love?
When men grow old, do they lose sensitivity?
When men grow old, they forget how to love
When men grow old, they have no sense of loyalty
Well, if that's how it is
I don't wanna grow anymore, anymore, anymore
Don't wanna grow no more
