

The Greatest Story Ever Told

City Boy

The scant applause and bar room bores had left him crying. But in his dreams, they kissed him clean, he heard them sighing. Woke up to a woman's touch and lying by his side She offered him the whole world's eyes ...

Tomorrow... You'll be the greatest story ever told.

Around her neck, was draped a snake, she held him to her And on her arm, a silver charm, with Roman numbers

He saw an eye gleaming like a cool and breathing icy cold She gave her hand and took his soul Tomorrow ...

He'd be the greatest story ever told. Tomorrow, Tomorrow . . You'll be the greatest story ever told. Tomorrow,

Tomorrow ... You'll be the greatest story ever told.

Banners bear your name, you'll see the whole world change But it just don't matter today, the fires are far away.

You'll be the greatest story ever told. She winked her eye, and smiled a smile, that left him chilly. The price of fame was all she claimed and he was willing. Now it never rains where he entertains and there's a cooling breeze. The fires burn eternally... With no ... Tomorrow. He's still the greatest story ever told. Tomorrow, Tomorrow, you'll be the greatest story ever told. Tomorrow, Tomorrow, you'll be the greatest story ever told.

Banners bear your name, you'll see the whole change But it just don't matter today, the fires are far away, you'll be the greatest story ever told. Tomorrow, Tomorrow, you'll be the greatest story ever told (Rep. etc).

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>