Arthur Beatrice

I see the way we coincide
And it's nothing more than chance.
If I were all for feeling fate,
I'd be none for you to trust.
So never tell me that I think of you holding on
To any solid body sinking me
Faith all goneLiving is an open sea and the waiting knows my length
So silent is a stranger's home where the hour caught me dead.
I'll never roll away the weight of you
Seems too much
I'll never hate the way I wanted to
Not enough
And so I come borrowing light
Some northern shore align
And all I'm aiming for
The locking in and waiting on
Just anything, a dust in the settlingSoberly stating the truth
I feel you,
Relieving the weight and it holds me
All too hard
Replacing the feeling so soon
Chain cloth removed, just like I'm told
Believe in all I do
And so I come borrowing light
Some northern shore align
And all I'm aiming for
The locking in and waiting on
Just anything, a dust in the settling
A dust in the settling
