

Another Crack In My Heart

Take That

I am just one man with his one pair of eyes
I dress in normal clothes and I don't try to disguise
I'm looking out for love however it may seem
I never do return in the always winning team Maybe I should try to live alone
Or raise the flag of mercy to unknown
Or maybe I should run and hide away
Until another day Another crack in my heart, another picture on the wall
Another way to spend an evening when there's no one there at all
Another kiss to say, goodbye, another cross upon a chart
Another suitcase at the door, another crack in my heart, in my heart I had my spills and thrills of love and held it in my hand
I held on tight until it broke and I crashed to the ground
Love cannot be on my side, it's clearer every day
That every time I reach for love, it always runs away Maybe I should try to live alone
Or raise the flag of mercy to unknown
Or maybe I should run and hide away
Until another day Another crack in my heart, another picture on the wall
Another way to spend an evening when there's no one there at all
Another kiss to say goodbye, another cross upon a chart
Another suitcase at the door, another crack in my heart, in my heart
In my heart Aah, another picture on the wall
Way to spend an evening when there's no one there at all
Kiss to say goodbye, cross upon a chart
Suitcase at the door, another crack in my heart Another crack in my heart, another picture on the wall
Another way to spend an evening when there's no one there at all
Another kiss to say goodbye, another cross upon a chart
Another suitcase at the door, another crack in my heart, in my heart Another crack in my heart
