

Look To The Hills

Ruff Endz

I'm sitting here crying in the dark
I'm trying to mend the wounds of my broken heart
It's hard to believe that you really gone
It's hard to really accept it and move on There's times I feel all hope is gone
I'm wanting embrace from your loving arms
But I must try and start all over again
And know that within myself I have strength Look to the hills, look to the mountains
From you in the storm, you can find strength
I know the hurt and pain that you cry
And no matter what goes on the sun will shine There's a lot of things I wanted to tell you
A lot of more getting to know you
But through God, I believe I can talk to you
And tell you that I'm always missing you Sometimes I get so lonely
And it seems like life ain't worth living for
When hurt and pain is all you feel inside
You go to look to the hills and say "I will survive" Look to the hills, look to the mountains
From you in the storm, you can find strength
I know the hurt and pain that you cry
And no matter what goes on the sun will shine When you're down and out and there's no way out
And you think that hope is gone
Lift your head up high and be strong and Look to the hills, look to the mountains
From you in the storm, you can find strength
I know the hurt and pain that you cry
And no matter what goes on the sun will shine Look to the hills, look to the mountains
From you in the storm, you can find strength
I know the hurt and pain that you cry
And no matter what goes on the sun will shine Look to the hills, look to the mountains
From you in the storm, you can find strength
I know the hurt and pain that you cry
And no matter what goes on the sun will shine

Songwriters

Jordan Dante A; Chance David; Clemons Michael G; Clemons Nathan B
Published by NATE LOVES MUSIC; SEVEN SUMMITS MUSIC
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941.
Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnyrics.com/>