Brief Encounter

Dawn Golden

I broke in
To your house again today
And I laid in your room
And it was pretty burden inside
'Cause it was all inside my head
I don't know whats real or dreaming anymoreIt's harder than it looks sometimes
To stand up straight and look you in the eyes
And believe in all your front door lies
'Cause it's your world I live inside
It's your world I live insideBury me
Inside the dark house inside your bedroom
And carve your name into my arm
And quietly
You'll fall asleep
And abandon me
But I take it; I'm readyIt's harder than it looks sometimes
To stand up straight and look you in the eyes
And believe in all your front door lies
'Cause it's your world I live inside
It's your world I live inside
