Click Clack

Nap Eyes

I thought I should talk, man, I guess I need to listen
When she got caught in this world that she didn't even think
The wool that hides the wolf inside sheep's clothing
Could be so soft, and now she's on the brinkOver the autumn fields, across the water Under the starry cloak of nightBlue light, baby won't you light me a lantern It's been too many hours since I last saw your pretty face if a night is dark but if I don't see it when the man turns his human bark into another placeSometimes drinking I feel so happy but then I can't remember why I feel sad all over again Sometimes drinking I don't know my best friend for my best friend Broken on the drum, an ancient ancient arrow his people cold, swept onto the tender plain and slow by slow by slow by slower than slow unto the open houses brought by the children of joseph camePlay songs by the fire a while Here are stories my child
Don't you feel like a train chugging, train chugging
In my head
Oh and now I know who I really really am I, I'm going to stay on track still I can't lose myself, I'm haunted by the sound
click clack click clackYes and now I know who I really am I, I'm going to stay on trackStill I cant really lose myself, I'm haunted
By the sound
click clack click clack
I thought I should talk, man, I guess I need to listen
When she got caught in this world that she didn't even think
the wool that hides the wolf inside sheep's clothing
could be so soft, now she's on the brink
