

Soon She Will Run

Jonny Diaz

she sits and stares through a window pane on a rainy august day her strength is erased from years gone by and her hair has long been grey her company is the memories but even those decay her children were gone the moment that her mind began to fade but through all the fear she dreams of a home that she's never seen but soon she will know soon she will run on fields of green and never wake up from her dreams embrace with joy the mysteries of beautiful that she's never seen soon she will run (he) big brown eyes and messy hair little boy wild confined to a chair the cancer has spread and there's not much time he's struggling through eight and hoping for nine he waves to his friends as they play in the yard love can be soft but life can be hard (soon he will) run and not tire for his life's just begun and for so long he's battled and finally he's won over pain and the fear that for so long he's known oh but peacefully now he is headed for home
