

Love Lives in Dark Places

Glass House Point

Mary sat alone on an old chapel pew
Buried her head in her hands
As she prayed for something new.
Clutched at her chest as her heart went askew.
Looked up to heaven and screamed
And said "God I need you."
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
Mary shut her eyes and let darkness drown her out.
Sank her teeth deep into the contours of her mouth.
She tasted blood with a bitter hint of doubt.
Reached towards light and its warm embrace
As her knees hit the ground.
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
Her tears, they formed a bloody heart-
Bleeding for love deep in the dark.
And with her bones stained scarlet red,
She found that love lives in dark places.
Oh, Oh, Oh, Oh....
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
She found love.
