

Sister Rosa and Her Man

Doak Snead

Sister Rosa and Her Man

iff Doak Snead

Jerry Boonstra

She shivers though the room is hardly cold
From the restlessness and the rape of growing old Amidst a cloud of saints she thinks of one lost soul
And of a conch and crucifix her fingers faithfully hold

(chorus) Moving Forward Looking Back

they say opposites attract and only God decides
the lovers and the friends

She hears footsteps on the water

She whispers one more "Holy Father"

And she confesses to the One who understands

The love between

Sister Rosa and Her Man

In dreams she drifts back to a tiny fishing town
Before the tourists brought their U.S. dollars down Where the seagulls soared in tandem along the sound
With the only man she ever wrapped her love around

Repeat chorus

Now a priest whispers verse in dusty Latin
She looks so peaceful in her gown of lace and satin Wearing a bridal veil for the wedding she's been planning For (to) the only love she'd found that's everlasting

(chorus) Moving Forward Looking Back

they say opposites attract
and only God decides
the lovers and the friends

She hears footsteps on the water

As the oil is placed upon her she's gone to meet the One who understands

The love between

Sister Rosa and Her Man
