Every Step

Trapdoor Social

Bring my face up to the glass
Everyone I know's a stranger
A trophy wall of masks
That I wander byAnd I wouldn't have turned my back
Had I know there was so much danger
In the middle of the act
I forgot my lineYou say it's all part of the plan
But there's nothing on the paper
There's no riddle to understand
Just uncertain mindsIf there's no reason to fear
Why feel the need to be the traitor
It's our hearts that are betrayed here
It's how we mark the timeSitting out on heaven's porch
Watching a thunderstorm
Tracing over every step
Back to when we were bornSo I hope your words were right
Now that they've framed and timeless
And you weren't acting out in spite
But a misread signNow in this house of glass
When you raise your hand in anger
They'll see you when they pass
And they'll wonder why
