Lugdunon

Eluveitie

We set forth
A retinue
With steed and cart
So we roved the landStealthily
Sailed out to find
To find new shores
As the passage ledSet sail, ye hearts
Into sea of hope
The druid's blessed
The mount foreseenWe grudge no pain
We faced distress
Yet a glowing wick
Kindles fireAlike a luminal place
A dormant beacon we faced
The heaven foretold
A fortress of ages to comeAt the rise of a new dawn
Woke the daughter of the sun
Wafted on black wings
Vastly soaring boding skiesWe followed
The rites of old
As we stoke out
Ordained new landWe held our breath
As the skies got black
And a storm arose
A swarm of crowsLo and behold
Black birds branched out
A circle wide
In the raven skiesThey lined nemeton
Of the fulgent hill
And again and again and again
The presage witnessedAlike a luminal place
A dormant beacon we faced
The heaven foretold
A fortress of ages to comeAdiantunne ni exverti
Adiantunne di nappisetu
Adiantunne ni exverti
Adiantunne di nappisetuAt the rise of a new dawn
Woke the daughter of the sun
Wafted on black wings

Vastly soaring boding skiesAt the rise of a new dawn
Woke the daughter of the sun
Wafted on black wings
Vastly soaring boding skies
