English As A Second Language

Written By David S Theroff

January 2003

Every morning he goes with his mom
Not sure what its all about
He gets there and see's everyone smile at him
Can't understand a word they say

He gets home and asks why they don't understand
His dad just shrugs and says he'll learn
He cry's to his mom, that no one likes him
Mom just hugs him and says it will be alright

His school sends homework home with him
His parents can't read what it says
He is abandoned to learn on his own
This new teacher is his only hope

This little one needs to raise himself
No one to explain the world to him
He lives a life like his parents before
He" raise his kids much the same

He'll never feel like he fits in this place
An outcast before he had a chance
He won't seem like one of us
He'll complain of rights he thinks he does not have
