

Write You A Song

Imogen Clark

Call my name and turn away.
Can't you see you're causing all this pain?
She says "Everything is just a game."
If it is then I don't want to play. So can we just fall asleep to the sound of this silence?
I don't want to live my life in war. These days are so precious,
Let us savour every one.
We're born and we die
And we're still so young. I want to live my life never fearing
What is to come.
And if there's one thing I know
I don't want this to hate to grow
'Cause it's been going on too long.
I guess I'll write you a song. Darkness hangs on things you say.
I'll just shrug it off and count the days
'Till you see you're making a mistake.
When you do I hope it's not too late. So can we just fall asleep to the sound of peaceful silence?
I don't want to live my life in war. These days are so precious,
Let us savour every one.
We're born and we die
And we're still so young. I want to live my life never fearing
What is to come.
And if there's one thing I know
I don't want this to hate to grow
'Cause it's been going on too long.
I guess I'll write you a song.
