Black Eyes

Radical Face

When you last left me my blood was in a jar
And you kept it on your mantelpiece
I couldn't count on anyone to stand there behind me
And keep the dogs from dragging me off with them
While I slept you crept in and pulled the rug right out from under me
Then the rain stole away and took the parts that kept me functioningMy heart will be blacker than your eyes when I'm through with youAnd I said, this life ain't no love song while I marched on blindly
And my knuckles dragged across the walls
And the birds up there mock me and the scenery's turned wicked
And your name is trapped beneath my tongueAll of the roads are one now, each choice is the same
All the roads, they are one now, each choice is the same
I won't show my hands now, I know this ain't a game
All the roads, they are one now, each choice is...Take a step, take another step, take another step, not a care for where they fall
You burned me, yeah you've burned me, yeah you've burned me now one too many times
My thoughts are the cold kind, I've got storm clouds that are brewing behind my eyesAnd my heart will be blacker than your eyes when I'm through with you

Songwriters
BENJAMIN COOPERPublished by Lyrics Â© Sony/ATV Music Publishing LLC, Peermusic Publishing

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/