Winterborn 77

Sirenia

There is a feeling deep inside as dreary as a winter night
It darkens all my pride and drives away the light
There is a feeling in my soul, it feels marooned and far too cold
I stand alone to face the wheel of time unfold

Darkness falls inside of me
And the sorrow's growing day by day
And though my life's a broken memory
There's a door and there's a key

Sorrow comes with silent tears
And the dawn still haunts my darkest fears
What have we both become throughout these years
There's a serpent in our tears

There is a river in my dreams that runs so wide, that runs so deep
And by its riverine I still can hear you weep
There is a winter in my heart so freezing cold and utter dark
It keeps me down and tears my sanity apart

Darkness falls inside of me
And the sorrow's growing day by day
And though my life's a broken memory
There's a door and there's a key

Sorrow comes with silent tears
And the dawn still haunts my darkest fears
What have we both become throughout these years
There's a serpent in our tears

Darkness falls inside of me
And the sorrow's growing day by day
And though my life's a broken memory
There's a door and there's a key

Sorrow comes with silent tears
And the dawn still haunts my darkest fears
What have we both become throughout these years
There's a serpent in our tears

Lyrics powered by lyrics.tancode.com written by VELAND, MORTEN/VELAND, MORTEN Lyrics Â© Warner/Chappell Music, Inc.

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/