

Light on Your Feet

Jeffry Denman

You were seen by someone enlisted; I know you feel doomed but he isn't brass, 'sides, you pass and so your innocence will be presumed. Keep your heads on and relax and if someone attacks: First, you laugh it off - always staying calm - then, diffuse their accusations with complete APPLAUD. Never beat a fast retreat. Learn to parry back - stay light on your feet - tell 'em "what the hell?" tell 'em "take a hike!" let 'em think it's out of boredom - not a thing you like. Blushing like a sugar beet makes them think the case against ya's complete. Army can't indict a fella light on his feet.

[spoken] Here, take a look at this: Stu's journal.

"What's so important in that?"

laughs [sung] Tales of the South Pacific that give you a clue of how Stu and me made it through lots of rough times.

April 23, on a base in Guam: I was spied beneath a bunk bed with a cook named Tom. [spoken] Oh, well hello there, Tom [sung] Said he spilled his drink and slipped; found a way to reconfigure the script.

August 17: Me and ensign drew... said that he was kneeling praying which was almost true.

First of June, an airmen's club: flyer said his muscles needed a rub... scene was quite a fright; we left that night still light on our feet - stay light on your feet. With some acrobatic thinking you can make it through - a bit of disguise, a little deceit... They've got the war to worry about, they want you to give 'em an out. So, make a leap, take a chance and you can dance through this mans army.
