

Saturation

Sleepyyard

They left me, leaving my house on fire
Me running round got out through the windowWhile clinging to the skirts of fate was not my idea of fun
I'll jump to it gladlyThe town was filled with smoke and hate
Came to my senses just too late
To realize that all I ever owned
Was borrowed I thanked them for having shown
(Me that nothing ever really belongs to anyone)They burned my books and they broke my car
And gave the dog to a man who used him for breedingThey felled my trees and they tramped flowers
And threw the kitten into my new poolThe same things done to other men had made them run
Away from the cityThis being the case, I joined them there and breathing air
Spent the night with these new friendsThe town was filled with smoke and hate
Came to my senses just too late
To realize that all I ever owned
Was borrowed I thanked them for having shown
(Me that nothing ever really belongs to anyone)

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlrics.com/>