

Love Story

Pepper Proud

Try to imagine a girl, by the ocean whoâ€™s figured it out,
But left out the best part and hopes that she gets what they said sheâ€™s in for and try,
To believe that all that sheâ€™d worked for and gone by and seen and that love was a fable,
Some sort of trinket and if you canâ€™t buy it maybe trade it but you,
Broke the framing of what it would feel like to settle on something,
Plain blue eyes donâ€™t tell lies and your teeth donâ€™t compromise,
The thoughts in my head or what I devised in love,
Like the river I learned how to dive in and spend most the summer just floating along,
In the warmth of your arms without any cares just paddling along and I wish, I,
Wish I could explain it but words never speak right and answers seem meaningless,
And distance is apparent it never quite feels right,
But what a great feeling when I get to stare in your eyes,
I get lost in and find myself later just humming the same song that you used to sing,
When weâ€™d harmonize right and find ourselves stuck beneath star-studded ceilings and love,
Like the river I learned how to dive in and spend most the summer just floating along,
In the warmth of your arms without any cares just paddling along and I wish, I,
Wish I could explain it but words never speak right and answers seem meaningless,
And distance is apparent it never quite feels right,
But what a great feeling when I get to stare in your eyes,
Oh Lord, like the river I learned how to dive in and spend most the summer just floating along,
In the warmth of your arms without any cares just paddling along.
