

Black and White

David Frizzell

She said "Why is it that you cannot seem to cough up a reason as to why you threw me into the Winter to freeze?"
I said "I cannot deliver to you a simple answer,
For it is far too complex for my complex to conceive.
I just let you go, to let you go.
I rain away, found drugs.
I don't think you deserve what I was.
And more importantly now, what I have become."
So now you say, you say, you say..."Don't you know that I am exactly what you wanted?
And still am what you want, and what you need.
But you seem to have forgotten, the promises you promised,
Where you do not forget about me."
You chase the time apart with alcohol and a fresh vibrant flame.
Though I do question the value within the hue.
While I'm held in the arms of a friend, nearly drank myself to death,
I spill of how it's always been about you. Then that morning we made the sweetest love.
I walked you outside to watch the sun,
As it rose to resemble you and I.
Days later the moon shone upon your lies.
So now I say, I say, I say..."Don't you know that I am exactly what you wanted?
And still am what you want, and what you need.
But you seem to have forgotten,
The promises you promised,
Where you do not forget about me."
Hurry, hurry, hurry like I
Scurry, scurry, scurry away.
Hurry, hurry, hurry before
I get carried away. Don't you know that I am exactly what you wanted?
And still am what you want, and what you need.
But you seem to have forgotten,
The promises you promised,
Where you do not forget about me.
