

The Silence

Mayday Parade

Torn in two, she lies awake
The moon lights up, her room like day
Another night she spends alone
Without his touch her skin's so cold His blood that's running through her veins
With every beat there's no escape
Lost in everything she trusts
Still can't seem to get enough Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And his heart of stone left hers breaking Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me
Nothing left inside
Say you love me and the silence will set her free Memories they take her back
Every moment fades to black
Every kiss and every taste
She wishes time would ease the pain Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And her heart is weak, her hands are shaking Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me
Say you love me and the silence will set her free
And every night she cries I don't know if I'll ever make this right
'Cause I am just so broken by the bitterness of loneliness
And I'm so scared of this I don't know if I'll ever make this right
'Cause I am just so broken by the bitterness of loneliness
And I'm so scared Even though the world she loved
It won't ever be the way it was
And his heart of stone left hers breaking Every night she cries and dies a little more each time
Say you love me
Say you love me and the silence will set her free
Every night she cries, every night she cries
The silence will set her free
