

Elements

A Fine Frenzy

You show up like a hurricane
All hungry eyed and weather stained
The clock forgets to tick and I the same I died the day you disappeared
So why would you be welcome here?
Ride the wind that brought you back away No, you can't come in
No, you can't come in I cannot stop my rebel hands
From pulling out the pots and pans
I left you in the cold until you shook You're gentle now but I recall
Both tender fire and bitter squall
A history so deep it hurts to look No, you can't come in
No, you can't come in
No, you can't, you can't come in If the sea should swallow up my house
I will turn the rooftop inside out
And the wind will be wailing
But I will be sailing faster Oh, the elements I do not fear
But I fall apart when you appear
'Cause you are the greatest
The greatest disaster
Of my life If the sea should swallow up my house
I will turn the rooftop inside out
And the wind will be wailing
But I will be sailing faster
