Overweight

Blue October

Overweight

ever carried the weight of another?
for how long?
or walk as far as they need to recover?
for how long?

i want to carry a piece of who i was before so when i hit the wall i really hit the wall i want to tear away the death again a whiter shade of fucking meth again i want to stick to clues i want to come unglued i want to shape the world to fit the way you move i should of listened for your dress size iâ€™ve grown up, i owned up do you remember me? i showed up and so what if i'm the used to be i'm here to tell you that iâ€™m sorry i was sorry but iâ€™m happy that you're happy this is no longer about me trade roles, switch sides for your beautiful eyes let him be there through your beautiful cries let him hold you up so you can touch all four of your skies and live your life just like a dream without the pain of goodbyes goodbye

ever carried the weight of another?
for how long?
or walk as far as they need to recover?
for how long?

iâ€™ve been a drunk, disrespectful little street punk unlock the back of my trunk, you see i take this bat and bash my head into the street again no ones around so i keep beating it pull my hair back and look me in the eye thereâ€™s a self-destructive meaning in the bleeding of a guy it's the guilt of what reality has given me making sense of all mistakes and my stupidity when your sick you seem to think you failed eternally and that the people you let in are only crumbling iâ€™m fucking sick of faking life and this recovery when my decisions paved the road that lies in front of me so to the friends that even call that i donâ€™t call back i hold you deep inside my heart upon a hill it seems to hide sometimes to run away and wonder iâ€™m really sick of saying sorry but i will ever carried the weight of another?

for how long?
or walk as far as they need to recover?
for how long?

are we scared to take the ride?
or dare to look inside... iâ€™m floating farther away floating farther away floating farther away... letting go i wanna learn to walk with others as an equal i wanna treat the ones who love me with respect i wanna tell the world iâ€™ll give them all a piggy back and try to take away my negative affect i wanna kiss a girl and know i'll never lie again i wanna call my dad and tell him that i care i wanna let my brother know he saved my life a thousand times throughout the years he's been the friend who's always there...

floating farther away
floating farther away
i'm floating farther away.....letting go

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/