Misery Hates Company

The Color Morale

Forget about yesterday, it's moved on from you
Live without the doubt that just won't go away
We've all stood at the edge, contemplated jumping
A leap of fear, loss of faith, we can't goYou see a face you think you know
But it's not the one I show
I feel more, more at home
In the places I don't knowI don't belong to my mistakes, tired of sleeping wide awake
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely
Even when I crawl I drag my feet, when did the world take hold of me?
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely, I can't feel at allI find myself back here again
But I'm not empty-handed
I'm not leaving, I'm not done, I'm not the kind that would run
Being lost is a lovely place to find yourself againYou see a face you think you know
But it's not the one I show
I feel more, more at home
In the places I don't knowI don't belong to my mistakes, tired of sleeping wide awake
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely
Even when I crawl I drag my feet, when did the world take hold of me?
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely, I can't feel at allI owe another shot to the world
It took a shot at me and missed
I owe another chance to myself
Take me back to the beginning
We all come from somethingI don't belong to my mistakes, tired of sleeping wide awake
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely
Even when I crawl I drag my feet, when did the world take hold of me?
It's killing me slowly, it's crowded and lonely, I can't feel at all

Songwriters
GARRET RAPP, ERIK RON, AARON SAUNDERSPublished by Lyrics Â© BMG RIGHTS MANAGEMENT,

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/