

You Always Wreck Closest to Home

On My Honor

Am I allowed to say
That I feel better these days
Despite the rumors
Despite the plans that didn't go our way
Stumble to the overpass
A repeat of three years ago before
The quitters, fights and touring
Took us away from "home"
Whatever that means
Considering
Changing casts and scenery
There are still some things
I refuse to let go We all missed something big when
We thought, "home is where the heart is"
Anatomy suggest to me
It's something that I'm stuck with, thankfully What became of the keys we made?
Maybe they all lost them or maybe they just threw them away
Wounds will fester and swell
Pushing out the worst parts
Because our tolerance is low
For disloyal hearts
You can't rely on houses
You can't rely on towns
You can't rely on friends to always need you round
You can spend all your daylight with worry
Living like this it gets dark so early We all missed something big when
We thought, "home is where the heart is"
Anatomy suggest to me
It's something that I'm stuck with, thankfully What became of the keys we made?
Maybe they all lost them or maybe they just threw them away
Along with me and everything it meant
How can this mean so much one day, just to mean nothing the next?
The door's still open but we've moved on
It doesn't need an address to be considered a home We all missed something big when
We thought, "home is where the heart is"
Anatomy suggest to me
It's something that I'm stuck with, thankfully

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>