

Love Song for a Witch

Dog Fashion Disco

I fell in love with a blue faced girl
As I fell to my knees at the crossroads
She descended to earth in a plastic bubble
Speaking in tongues of false prophets
Ugly as sin and possessed beyond hope
We made love as we flew through the sky
Cursed to one day crash and burn
Because we fly so goddamned high To my surprise she was a witch
From salem massachusetts
A high priestess of the occult
In the church of satan
A demon and unholy ghost
The parasite had found it's host
Inside the cold and vacant soul
Of this one and only love Between the devil and deep blue sea
The story of us reads just like a graveside eulogy This is a love song for a witch
A romantic remembrance for this
Is a love song for a witch This is a love song for a witch
A romantic remembrance for this
Is a love song for a witch Spinning crucifixes on the bedroom wall of the possessed
As words appear in blood like deep incisions on her chest
Her head gyrates and turns three hundred and sixty degrees
As poison apples in the garden fall down from the trees Between the devil and deep blue sea
The story of us reads just like a graveside eulogy Between the devil and deep blue sea
The story of us reads just like a graveside eulogy This is a love song for a witch
A romantic remembrance for this
Is a love song for a witch This is a love song for a witch
A romantic remembrance for this
Is a love song for a witch
