Before we knew what we were missing
Before we felt desire's sting
We were content with what we had
And never wanted for anythingWe know it's futile to compare
Our culture was the culprit, we were taken unawareManifest the weakness, a self-fulfilling prophecy
Undermining every insecurityIt's a fear growing deeper when no one's around
Like a nagging aching sore
The devil's in the detail, the truth inconsequential
The idle mind is scrutinised and robbed of its potential in time
Begging for redemption
Pleading for solutions
We know we never should have had this cross to bear
Our culture was the culprit, we were taken unawareWe've been led to think we needed more (Resenting who we are)
Only to find that we were better off before
(Before we bought what we were sold, before we tried to fit the mould)We've been chasing false perfection
Searching in the wrong direction
This is the crux of our corruption
Drawn into social seductionManifest the weakness, a self-fulfilling prophecy
Undermining every insecurityTo fan the flame, to watch your pride burn away
To reinforce the fear that taught us that we're never good enough
We've been chasing false perfection
Searching in the wrong direction
This is the crux of our corruption
Drawn into social seduction
