

Pride And Shame

Ten Foot Pole

Is there something more I just can't see?
I've been so busy trying every day to make ends meet
    Been such a long time
    Since I stopped to smell the coffee
Now I wonder: can I tell the forest from the trees?I know that I feel pride and I know that I fear shame
    I know I want you to smile when you hear my name
        Seems like a silly game
    But I know I play it harder than anythingI feel alone
        There's people everywhere
        Some of these people even care
    Once in a while you find someone who really cares
        But I'm too busy to give them what they need
        It's not greed, it's the fear of failure
        It keeps me going
    But when tomorrow comes, there's always something more
        And I can't stop working long enough
        To wonder what life's for
        What is it for?
        Am I just a whore?
        Who am I working for?
