Avada Kedavra

The Age of Rockets

Well, you're not brave if you still keep the letters,
And you're not sane if you don't want to get better,
And you're not drunk if you can stay in your lane, no.

Well, you're not awake, but you haven't been sleeping,
And you hate God, but you don't believe in him,
And you're not scared, but you've still got your eyes closed.

[Chorus]
The sky explodes, and only you'll know.
The sky explodes, and only you'll know.
The shy explodes, and only you'll know.

Well, it's not fixed if you love it broken,
And you're cell phone's at the bottom of the ocean,
And you're not drunk if you can stay in your lane, no.

Well, you're not brave and you're making a lane shift;
You're not lost, but you're missing your exit,
And you're not scared, but you've still got your eyes closed...

I want you to worry when I don't call you back.
I want you to worry when I don't call you back.

[Chorus]
The sky explodes, and only you'll know.
The sky explodes, and only you'll know.
The sky explodes, and only you'll know.
The sky explodes; only you'll know.

Only you'll know.
Only you'll know.
Only you'll know.
