

Harder to Believe Than Not to

Steve Taylor

Nothing is colder than the winds of change
Where the chill numbs the dreamer till a shadow remains
    Among the ruins lies your tortured soul
        Was it lost there
        Or did your will surrender control?

Shivering with doubts that were left unattended
So you toss away the cloak that you should have mended
    Don't you know by now why the chosen are few?
        It's harder to believe than not to
        Harder to believe than not to

It was a confidence that got you by
When you know you believed it, but you didn't know why
    No one imagines it will come to this
        But it gets so hard when people don't want to listen

Shivering with doubts that you left unattended
So you toss away the cloak that you should have mended
    Don't you know by now why the chosen are few?
        It's harder to believe than not to

Some stay paralyzed until they succumb
Others do what they feel, but their senses are numb
    Some get trampled by the pious throng
        Still they limp along

Are you sturdy enough to move to the front?
Is it nods of approval or the truth that you want?
And if they call it a crutch, then you walk with pride
Your accusers have always been afraid to go outside

They shiver with doubts that were left unattended
Then they toss away the cloak that they should have mended
    You know by now why the chosen are few
        It's harder to believe than not to

I believe
