

Two

Edward Sharpe & The Magnetic Zeros

I am the prisoned man of single melody
Two voices carry farther than me
I seek your help so that my song may become free
Two voices carry farther than me And in the morning, sing me love
And in the afternoon, it's love
And in the evening, if they love
And in the morning, wake up
And if we sing together, love will sing along
Two voices carry farther than one
Together we can bridge a chorus to the dawn
Two voices carry far, all the days Time and mind they melt away,
Like the stars and songs of yesterday
Like the melody you can't recall,
But the harmonies you felt them, all the days This song of solitude has sung its melody
Two voices carry farther than me
I seek your help, so that song may become free
Two voices carry farther than me And in the morning, sing me love
And in the afternoon, it's love
And in the evening, is there love?
And in the morning, wake up Time and mind they melt away,
Like the stars and songs of yesterday
Like the melody you can't recall,
But the harmonies you felt them all the days And if we sing together, love will sing along
Two voices carry farther than one
Together we can bridge a chorus to the dawn
Two voices carry farther than one, farther than one, carry on
And in the morning, wake up

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>