

We Are All Dying

Vehemence

What has come?
What mankind has created
Comfortable, the silk and the cushion
That we're laying in
Not real our lives deceit
We know what is coming
There's a fire that's burning within all of our hearts
They will know what all of this burning has created
These old men consumed in the pyre of our quest for life
Politicians soon unemployed and begging forgiveness
Their lies, worthless deceit
They know what is coming
They know
The world will die if they are left in control
The world will die if they are left holding the reigns
The world will die if old men are left holding our fate
The world will die if something doesn't change
We are dying
We are all dying
Held up in our fortress, the bad men have broken through
The war is now fought at home and there's nothing we can do
They infiltrate our security, they've broken down our walls
We all line up homeless, looking for justice in empty halls
Something must change
Held up in our fortress, the bad men have broken through
The war is now fought at home and there's nothing we can do
They infiltrate our security, they've broken down our walls
We all line up homeless, looking for justice in empty halls
