

Blue Again

Wayne Haun

BLUE AGAIN CHORUS ONE:

Skies will be blue again
Oh just you wait and see, it's all new again
For you and for me all these hard days will end
And those gray skies will be blue again
So we'll just muddle on
Till the clouds and the rains have just up and gone
And we'll make it through until then
When your gray skies will be blue again

VERSE ONE:
Every single tear and every single dream
That fell down from the stars in your eyes
Will soon disappear and this will seem
Like at least a million miles away
From the dark, stormy

CHORUS TWO:

Skies will be blue again
Just look, it's happening now, oh it's true again
The sun shines somehow through your sadness and pain
But your gray skies will be blue again
And we'll look back at this, and we'll just have to smile at the sudden bliss
That reminds of how and of when
Every gray sky will be blue again
