

Along the Way

P.T. Walkley

along the way you'll find a second wind the song you play will let the day begin so take advantage of the time you have and learn to laugh and what you sing

things are being stolen from the hourglass things have been unwoven in the aftermath foolishly you've chosen not to open up the other half and if the wind should bring you back to me call up and tell me what you'd rather be and if the phone books have been banned you'll have to send it telepathically

and when your ghost is haunting me (and i won't be afraid) i will make the most of what you see (and i won't be afraid)
won't let them overlook how much they took from me don't look back baby don't look back it's catching up to you

i'll make the most of what you see won't let them overlook how much they took from me
