Back, Baby

Jessica Pratt

Sometimes I pray for rain
You know I tried to see things from your side
To leave things undefined
But where would you advise?Let it generate a new design
For the missing piece I had to disguise
Saw a paper with your head in it your love is just a myth I devisedAnd things like that you can never take back again
Things like that you can never take back again
If there was a time when you loved me
If there was a time when you said that you want me to believe
But you can't go back baby
Can't go back baby
And sometimes I pray for the rainYou and your glass world that does rain
Oh where time's a frozen thing
It encloses you in its crystalline
Look so lovely but you'll have to decide
If you could play it in reverse then you'd find
That you'd better reconsider all the love you took
And then cast aside.But things like that you can never take back again
Things like that you can never take back again
If there was a time when you loved me
If there was a time when you said that you want me to believe
But you can't go back baby
Can't go back baby
And sometimes I pray for the rainGirl I know I'm losing time without you
Never had a second chance before
This time
But things like that they never do work out right
Things like that they never do work out right
Can't go back baby
Can't go back baby
And sometimes I pray for the rain
And sometimes I pray for the rain
