

Too Late for Lullabies

James Morrison

Oooh

It's a sad song that has no end
It's a bleeding heart that never mends
A minor miracle we can still pretend

After so long

Did the apple fall too far from the tree?
Did we get lost in the space in-between?

But the roots that we buried so deep

Will always be strong

Too late for lullabies

Too soon for it alright

Love takes its toll sometimes

Let's start a clean slate, mistakes are moments in time

For every time you ever raised up your hand

I'll give you mine to show you I understand

You taught me to fly by learning to fall

Ooo yeah

Love burns when it's in the blood

And god knows I burnt you the best I could

How can three words be so misunderstood?

We got it so wrong

Yeah the greatest gift that you ever gave to me

You don't know your strength 'till you've faced defeat

So everything's just out of reach

You keep holding on

Too late for lullabies

Too soon for it alright

Love takes its toll sometimes

Let's start a clean slate, mistakes are moments in time

For every time you ever raised up your hand

I'll give you mine to show you I understand

You taught me to fly by learning to fall

We built a brick wall but it's all for nothing

Only bridges will cross this divide

We both know this road leads to nowhere

There is nothing left for you to hide

Too late for lullabies

Too soon for it alright

Love takes its toll sometimes

Let's start a clean slate, mistakes are moments in time
For every time you ever raised up your hand
I'll give you mine to show you I understand
You taught me to fly by learning to fall
Too late for lullabies
Too soon for it alright
Love takes its toll sometimes

Let's start a clean slate, mistakes are moments in time
For everytime you ever raised up your hand
I'll give you mine to show you I understand
You taught me to fly by learning to fall

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>