

My Lover and My Ghost

Lucas Chaisson

It's no mystery that your passion got so buried in the sand
All that action never acted in the words I never said
And you're troubled by this notion by your long lost happiness
Keep hoping your emotion, we can learn to love again
And you'll find me in the silence, and the rollercoaster hills
And that empty space beside you, and the unrelenting will
In the early morning coffee, and the stars above your bed
When your body's tired and you can't get to sleep at 4 AM

I'm in love with my ghost
He's the one that I love most
But he's not one to say when he's sorry
And I won't forgive the day
That he chased my love away
Oh, the unforgiving ending to my story

And we started off so happy, there's no need to play pretend
And your eyes would twinkle brightly when I held you in my hand
And the winds would sing a chorus as they blew through your brown hair
Your pretty crooked smile was like an answer to my prayers
And the there of us grew closer as the time moved quickly by
For you, me, and my ghost there was no need to question why
By my ghost started getting jealous, and began to hog my love
As you were staring out the window of your '97 Dodge

I'm in love with my ghost
He's the one that I love most
But he's not one to say when he's sorry
And I won't forgive the day
That he chased my love away
Oh, the unforgiving ending to my story

Well it killed me how you'd stare into those hollow, empty eyes
My ghost had taken over, and polluted me with lies
Each day I should have called you beautiful, and asked you were
And I should said I loved you every time I left your car
Should have let you know I'm proud of you and told you when you're right
And each time you reached out for my hand I should have held on tight
Should have acted more excited when you called me on the phone
And I should have noticed all this before your love began to roam

Should have done all of the little things, the things that matter most
Should have held on to my lover
Should have let go
Of my
Ghost.
