Phineas Newborn, Jr.

Ooh, oh, oh, ooh, yeah
Oh, you were wild and you were free, you were sons of destiny
    But the White Man came and took your land away
You were fire, you were flame, you were blood inside that vein
    How he brought you fame, the day he came to stay
        I hear you howling through the night
        The wind is cold, the moon is like a flame
            You cry our sorrow, hopes alike
            And wakes a vengeance in your heart
            Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
                Where your spirit lives forever
            Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
                Where all your freedom lasts forever
You were young but you were wise, you were smoke that always raised
    How he put you down and spat upon your name
You were snow, oh, you were rain, you would walk without a chain
    But he changed your life and gave you all the blame
        The sound of thunder breaks the arch
        Ten thousand ridin', side by side
        The time has come to end the fight, oh
        For their freedom, for their rights, yeah
        Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
            Where your spirit lives forever
        Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
            Where all your freedom lasts forever
The fire burns tonight, we all recall the fight
    Where blood was shed without a reason
Two hundred years have passed since you stood ashore
    And raped your land down to the core
    Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
        Where your spirit lives forever
    Cherokee, riding free, you ride into the sky
        Where all your freedom lasts forever
Oh, Cherokee, you're riding free, you ride into the sky
    Where your spirit lives forever, oh
    Cherokee, you're riding free, you ride into the sky
        Where all your freedom lasts forever, oh, oh, oh
