

Honor Never Dies (Mixed By “Josh Wilbur)

Hatebreed

Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone When the limelight grows dim
And our heroes fade away
Some men still fight silent battles until their final days
Some will be forgotten having no one know their names
But I stand here grateful for the courage that they gave I am just a son
A brother, a father and a friend
No more, not any less
I am just another man still fighting
But I wouldn't be here if I wasn't taught that
Honor never dies When your heart is questioned
There are hearts with hope still beating
Waiting for footsteps that might not come
Born with nothing just a weight to carry through life
And the journey they are on I am just a son
A brother, a father and a friend
No more, not any less
I am just another man still fighting
But I wouldn't be here if I wasn't taught that
Honor never dies When your heart is questioned
Honor never dies
When your beliefs are tested Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone
Sometimes standing for what you believe
Means standing alone

Songwriters

CHRIS BEATTIE, JAMEY JASTA Published by

Lyrics © Kobalt Music Publishing Ltd., THE BICYCLE MUSIC COMPANY Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>