

I'm Learning

Vonray

I pretend you sit in front of me.
I know this conversation well (well)
Back and forth between reality
And what I come to believe is all I have Words are just a form of emptiness
When there no one there to hear (me)
I see the bottom of this empty glass
It staring back and I can feel the pain I see tomorrow in your eyes I learning to cry
I take it in stride
I learning to fly
I learning to hold my head up high This fascination with what might have been Always seems to leave me cold
I gone so far and now I back again
The need to be (feel) alive is all I know I see tomorrow in your eyes I learning to cry
I take it in stride (after all these years)
I learning to fly
I learning to hold my head up high I Will hold up my hands
When I don think I can
There a peace right outside
In the light I learning to cry
I take it in stride (after all these years)
I learning to fly
I learning to hold my head up high I learning to cry
Don keep it inside (learn to face my fears)
I learning to try
I learning to hold my head up high I learning
I learning
